Andrew Hempstead is a travel writer and photographer who has traveled widely throughout Canada from his home in Banff, Alberta. His research trip for this book took him to every corner of the Maritimes, and along the way he found himself surrounded by whales in the Bay of Fundy, surfing along Nova Scotia's East Coast, and golfing in the fairways of Prince Edward Island. In addition to this book, Hempstead has authored guidebooks to Alberta, British Columbia, the Canadian Rockies, and Vancouver. He also co-authored guidebooks to Atlantic Canada, Australia, and New Zealand. Furthermore, his writing and photography have appeared in various national and international publications.

Great book! Very informative.

Well presented material. I found in using other travel "Dummies" books that the information makes a difference in the enjoyment of the trip. This one was not an exception. Other travel books lack much of the wisdom and anecdotes contained in "Dummies" volumes.

Lots of information. I have not visited N. S. to actually use book. Plan to go in 3 months. Good luck to all.

REally falls short of what I'm looking for. I wanted a resource for planning an RV trip through the Maritimes, and this was almost no help at all. Didn't discuss travel times, didn't identify places where RV camping is supported, didn't identify pet-friendly venues. On the other hand, it told me several times how to check in at an airport.
